London on the subject of opium-smoking. column, is a document well worth reading. It is noticeable that the memorialists, unlik the fanatical members of the Anglo-Oriental Society for the Suppression of the Opium Traffic, do not seek to saddle the British-Indian Government with the responsibility for the prevalence of opium smoking in China. They are less prejudiced, better informed and blessed with more common sonse than the enthusiasts who are prepared to rob the Indian Government of a large portion of its revenue for the sake of an idea. Hence they do not hesitate to throw the onus where should properly rest. They show that to the action of the Chinese authorities is due not only the increasing growth of the poppy in the Central Kingdom, but the extension of the practice of smoking it. The malicious diggers in Australia. The writer seems to be statement coined by the anti-opium agitators to the effect that England introduced opium into China is shown to be a baseless fiction a right to prevent their digging for gold, as the by the memorialists, who refer to the first interdict against opium, and state that it was imposed more than a century and a half ago. There is reason to believe, however, dukes and duchesses, on a footing of perfect that it was grown in small quantities long equality! As a matter of fact, without any antecedent to that date both in Kweichow and Yunnan, though the practice of smoking was little indulged in then. Its production has spread gradually from province to province, unhindered by the mandarins, in spite of the English royalty, is of course too absurd for Imperial proclamations against its cultivation. Whether this has been permitted simply through the corruption or negligence of the officials, or whether it is owing to the secret determination of the Govern ment to foster the production of the native drug in order to oust fereign opium from the Chinese market, we cannot say. But it is certain, at all events, that the law prohibiting the cultivation of the poppy on Chinese soil has Guimaraes, relating to the Netherlands three- a change of tenancy. been suffered to become a dead letter.

This fact is most emphatically asserted by the Chinese Envoys, and they proceed to point out the evil arising from it. They state, with regard to the culture of opium in Szechuen; Yunnan, Kansuh, and Shensi, that the authorities at the provincial capital in the departments and in the subordinate districts "have introduced additional levies of an illegal character, and collect an unauthorised duty upon the opium produced, whereby a revenue is obtained larger by several times than the amount established by law for the regular taxation. Both officials and people having in this wise a source of profit open to them, the I understand it correctly. His reasoning appears practice has spread far and wide this long time past in every direction. The population, moreover, employed in the cultivation of the fore, that the score of two can score them, alpoppy, including both the sexes, has become addicted to the practice of smoking, in the absence of means to place them under stringent prohibition, as is done in India, against the smoking of opium which is there produced. As a result of this state of affairs, slothful and negligent habits are developed. and a wasteful system of expenditure becomes assert B's claim to lose only a single in the case us. Much the same report comes from all daily on the increase." The memorialists go on to call attention to the fact that the food supply is interfered with, and point out that in the reign of YUEN CHENG an imperial edict was issued forbidding the cultivation of the sugar-cane in the province of Kwangtung for the same reasons, and rightly insist that there is infinitely more cause for tricks and held four by honours. the prohibition of the production of opium, since sugar is really an article of food. Most people will be surprised at such an order as that against sugar-cane having ever been promulgated, but the grandfatherly system of government in China provides that the main pursuit of the people shall be the raising of eorn and vegetables. Such an edict would scarcely be issued now, and if issued, would

On the contrary, there is too much reason to believe that, like many more Imperial decrees, it was only issued for the sake of appearance. The cultivation of the poppy is even now spreading in some parts, and we shall be very much surprised if any efforts are made to curtail it. No faith can be placed in the sincerity of the Chinese Government's desire to put a barque M. As a result of this state of measures for relief are in progress. But I know | uffairs, slothful and negligent habits are developed, and a wasteful system of expenditure becomes daily on the increase. It is impossible consequently, in many cases, to meet the demands of the established system of taxation and the ovils of poverty make themselves felt The supplies which are required for the food of the people are interfered with, and the stores which should fill the granaries become reduced to nought. In view of the boundless evils which must follow in the train of a wide extension of the poppy cultivation, it connet be imagined that we can continue to hold our own.

The fact should be recalled that in the reign of Yung Cheng (A.D. 1723-1735) an imperial edict forbade the cultivation of sugar-case in the province of Kwangtung. The motive of this earnest step was anxiety on behalf of the food supply of the people; yet if, in the case of the sugar-cane, which itself produces an article of daily necessity in food, the heart of the Sacred one was disturbed with care, how much the more must this be the case in respect of opium, an actual pource of injury to the State! Prostrate, therefore, we would entreat your Majesty to adopt a policy, firm in principle al-though lenient in point of time. Within a period of three years [we would have] the provincial Literary Chancellors throughout the Empire required to set matters wight as regards the educational associations within their several jurisdictions, and the Governors-General and Governors required to effect such reform as is necessary among the ranks of their subordinates. As regards the cultivation of the the high authorities should require the trict and department Magistrates to call upon the notables and people generally to set matters right in the localities respectively under their control, a change being thus gradually brought about by patient effort and exhortation. Beyond all this, if within a period of twenty
